With the advance of evidence-based practice has come the publication of numerous dense volumes replete with theoretical and empirical components of child and adolescent treatment. There are also a variety of detailed treatment manuals that describe the step-by-step procedures to guide ongoing research and practice. This new edition of Craig Winston LeCroy's Handbook of Evidence-Based Child and Adolescent Treatment Manuals provides a forceful combination of the two approaches, as he gathers fifteen varied treatment manuals and briefs on the research supporting each to ensure that practitioners will truly understand how to implement the programs they are using. A completely revised and expanded edition of the handbook's first edition, this is an essential guide to some of the best programs for helping children and teens. Each chapter begins with an explanatory introduction that discusses the theoretical and empirical underpinnings of the programs. The treatment manual follows, guiding readers through sessions with specific details about conducting the treatment that have been refined and improved through extensive testing and research. Organized into three sections: the major clinical disorders, social problems confronting children and teens, and preventive interventions the Handbook brings together the work of the most esteemed researcher-practitioners in the child and adolescent field. The book presents an impressive variety of innovative treatment programs and techniques including: the SiHLE program (intended to prevent and address problems confronting children and teens, and preventive interventions the Handbook brings together the work of the most esteemed researcher-practitioners in the child and adolescent field. the worst human refugee crisis since World War II as the backdrop, from March 16 through March 18, 2015. The National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, in partnership with UNICEF and the King Abdul Aziz Bin Abdulaziz International Center for Inter-religious and Intercultural Dialogue (KAICIID), held a workshop in Amman, Jordan, to explore topics related to investing in young children for peaceful societies. Over the course of the workshop, researchers, policy makers, program practitioners, funders, youth, and other experts came together to understand the effects of conflict and violence on children, women, and youth across areas of health, education, nutrition, social protection, and other domains. The goal of the workshop was to continue to fill in gaps in our knowledge and explore opportunities for discourse through a process of highlighting the science and practice of child development. This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop. Children are gifts from the Lord. In this practical guide to parenting, Andrew Murray shows the essential qualities of being a parent who loves the Lord. Finding Your Way This brief-easy-to-understand book explains what happens when a child discloses abuse and how various systems may respond to this disclosure, from police involvement through prosecution or juvenile court involvement to therapy. Getting Ready for Court: Criminal Court Edition A fun, friendly first step in helping prepare primary-aged children to testify in criminal cases involving abuse. Getting Ready for court: Civil court Edition This child-friendly book is a first step in helping prepare primary-aged children to testify in civil cases involving abuse. This book presents an exploration of the beliefs and expectations of parents, Early Childhood Education and Care (ECEC) practitioners and teachers and their relationships during children's transition to school. This exploration was prompted by the author's observations that the relationships between ECEC practitioners and teachers became increasingly strained when the term school readiness was introduced to the EYFS. Drawing on the findings of empirical research, the book presents the four qualities of relationships between parents, ECEC practitioners and teachers during children's transition to school. Unlike many current texts, this book extends the transition to include the phases of preparation and adjustment. It also explores how the qualities of relationships between parents, ECEC practitioners and teachers can change throughout the phases of the transition. The conceptual framework, 'The Relational Transition to School', was developed and is a useful tool for researchers and those working together to explore the qualities of relationships between those supporting children during a transition. An Empirical Approach to Preparing Children for Court: School Edition This book will be of great interest to researchers, academics and postgraduate students in the field of early childhood education, as well as those training to be early years practitioners. Includes reports of the findings from the departments.
